Hi Louis,

I want to provide my rationale for having your NWA talk live streamed. I'm worried we'll be missing a big opportunity if we don't do this. Using this platform to reinforce the message will be viewed positively by many employees and the weather enterprise (who have come out in droves to support NWS).

1. This is the ultimate in transparency. I truly believe that part of the reason we've seen such a shift in the way the Director's position is viewed is in part because of the candidness of the Fireside Chats. This is the same concept, just on a different stage. In your talk I know you'll be covering the great work done by NWS employees, and seeing that it's live broadcast they'll know your message is unaltered. Posting something pre-recorded always leaves that chance that something has been changed or removed.

3. Periscope is a DOC/NOAA approved platform for us to use within Twitter. Multiple NWS accounts use the platform including NHC, especially during Hurricane Prep Week, and local offices often use it during outreach. Using this in the capacity of streaming your NWA speech is not something that would bend or break any rules - it is completely in compliance with the policy. [REDACTED]

I hope you'll reconsider and allow Alli to livestream it. I hope you have a good week in Huntsville and visiting the nearby offices.

Katie

Greetings from Huntsville,

Louis says he doesn't want his presentation to be broadcasted live tomorrow. He says he wants to wait until after Neil's presentation on Wednesday to share his presentation on social media.

Additionally, Greg Romano brought a gorilla tripod, so we'll use that and his nice Galaxy phone to record the presentation.

Best,

Alli
